Questions

Q1. What is the overall average operating margin across all sales?

A: The average operating margin is 42.3%, indicating healthy profitability across channels.

Q2. Which region generated the highest revenue?

A: The West region, contributing over $3.64M in total sales.

Q3. Which retailer is the most profitable for Coca-Cola?

A: West Soda leads with over $3.24M in total sales.

Q4. Which Coca-Cola beverage brand is most popular by revenue?

A: Coca-Cola (the classic brand) with sales of $2.76M.

Q5. What is the correlation between units sold and total sales?

A: A strong direct correlation exists—higher units sold leads to higher revenue, considering a fairly consistent price per unit.

Q6. What is the price per unit trend across different brands?

A: The average price is $0.45, with minor variations depending on the product tier (e.g., premium vs. economy brands).

Q7. Which retailer has the lowest average operating margin?

A: This would require filtering individual records; a follow-up pivot chart or analysis could isolate this.

Q8. Which state contributes most to Coca-Cola sales?

A: From the dataset preview, New York appears frequently, but a full state-wise aggregation would confirm.

Q9. Are there any brands underperforming in terms of profit?

A: Brands not in the top 5 list (e.g., Minute Maid, Smart water) likely underperform and should be examined.

Q10. How can Coca-Cola improve overall profitability?

A: Focus on scaling operations in high-margin regions like the West and high-selling retailers such as West Soda while optimizing distribution in low-performing areas.

Conclusion Summary

- Coca-Cola achieved strong performance with $12M+ in sales and a 42.3% operating margin.
- The West region and retailers like West Soda and BevCo led in revenue.
- Coca-Cola classic and Dasani Water were the top-selling brands.
- The dashboard highlights areas for growth and optimization.
- Overall, it supports data-driven decisions to boost profitability and efficiency.
